Integrating AI in Dispute Resolution: Insights & Ethical Considerations

Presented by Susan Guthrie & Colin Rule

9:00am-10:45am

In an era where artificial intelligence (AI) reshapes the very foundation of dispute resolution, our training session led by Colin Rule and Susan Guthrie dives into the heart of this transformation. This exploration isn't just about understanding AI's role in enhancing efficiency and equity; it delves into the ethical considerations underpinning its integration into mediation and law.

As we navigate the practical applications of AI, from providing analytical insights to improving accessibility in dispute resolution processes, we embark on a journey that transcends traditional boundaries. This session unveils the complexities and opportunities presented by AI, offering a unique blend of theoretical knowledge and practical strategies to empower participants. This is an opportunity to engage with the forefront of technological innovation, ensuring we remain adaptable, forward-thinking, and equipped to navigate the evolving landscape of dispute resolution. We explore how AI is not just changing the way we approach conflicts but also enriching our capacity to connect, understand, and resolve disputes in the modern world.

Dollars & Sense: Lessons from Behavioral Economics

Presented by Jeff Kreisler

11:00am-12:30pm

We think of money as numbers, values and amounts but when it comes down to it, when we actually use money, we engage our hearts way more than our heads...

In this presentation, author and behavioral economist Jeff Kreisler challenges our most basic assumptions about the precarious relationship peoples' brains and their money. As mediators, we've all seen elements of behavioral economics in play during dollar negotiations; anchoring and reciprocity among the most common. It's useful for us to be aware of these 'predictably irrational' biases that are hardwired into the brains of all the participants in our mediations. Exploring a range of topics and examples, Jeff guides us through an overview of the psychological forces working against optimal negotiated solutions... and how we might help the parties overcome them.

How To Create Connection, Calm Anger & Build Trust, Online or In-Person

Presented by Doug Noll

1:30pm-3:00pm & 3.15pm-4.45pm

Drawing on discoveries in neuroscience, Doug will explore how emotions are culturally created in the brain and the implications of that insight to your daily mediation practice. Behaviors that were once indecipherable will be understood. What appeared to you as emotional chaos will be rendered into knowledgeable insight...

We will learn about the four levels of reflective listening and why "active" listening has never worked. The fourth level, affect labeling, is a counter-intuitive and highly effective skill Doug stumbled upon in a high conflict mediation in 2006. His extensive research into the "why" and years of experience refining it will culminate in your introduction to and beginning mastery of this foundational skill.

We will learn the five basic strategies all humans use in emotional situations and why they so often fail. Doug explains the 6 needs of victims and why lawyers often feel and act as victims in the mediation itself. We'll also discuss emotional invalidation: how to recognize it, and how to avoid it in mediations.

In the second session, Doug will introduce more advanced skills around affect labeling and we'll explore polyvagal theory - an elegant explanation of how the brain connects to the gut. You will learn some simple, effective tools for activating the myelinated vagal system in parties and lawyers and thus create a deep sense of safety and trust in the room.

This is a highly interactive workshop. You will be talking, practicing the skills, and applying your new deeper knowledge so that it will be immediately useful to you on your return to the office.

Christmas Parties, Social Media & Implicit Bias: A Stroll Through the Ethical Junkyard of Mediation

Presented by Jeff Kichaven

9:00am-10:30am

Our neutrality is as fragile as it is essential. Forces beyond our conscious thoughts prey upon our neutrality every day. Those forces can involve seemingly ordinary social interactions, both in real life and online.

Everything from a Christmas party to a casual cup of coffee can be fraught with risk. Is it possible to make ourselves aware of all the challenges everyday life hurls against our neutrality? And once aware, what should we do? Do the demands of neutrality require us to become reclusive, or even rude?

If the decision to become a mediator or arbitrator means you have to become a hermit, who among us would stay in this career? Where do we draw the line between what is and isn't permissible? How should we govern ourselves, both online and off, to preserve our neutrality and our integrity, and still enjoy life?

Ego, Humility & Why People Hire Us - Or Don't

Presented by Sam Ardery

10:45am-12:30pm

Those of us who repeatedly and willingly step into other people's disputes, have opinions about why people hire us. But do we really know? Have we asked? Do we agree among ourselves what qualities are most important?

Everyone has an ego; everyone has an opinion; and everyone has been wrong. If we don't embrace humility, it will sit down beside us without permission. Power, trust, and control spice the entire dish.

We will discuss qualities that we believe are most central to being a good mediator, and how those dovetail with being a good human. We will explore opinions, control, anger, power, acceptance, and service. Perhaps our minds will change. That conversation can lead to a better understanding of why people hire us. If we are fortunate, we may learn that similar talents can be used differently but with equally effective skill.

Harnessing the Wisdom of the Room

Presented by Lee Jay Berman

1:30pm-3:00pm

Every 2 years, the Retreat sees many of the most experienced mediators gathered together from across North America. This is our chance to tap into that collective wisdom.

In this highly interactive session, mediators will embark on a journey of self-reflection and peer engagement. This workshop provides a platform for mediators to collaborate, sharing their personal experiences and pose thought-provoking questions for discussion among their peers. Whether it's navigating complex conflict scenarios, honing negotiation techniques, or grappling with ethical dilemmas, we'll offer a supportive space for mediators to gain insights, perspectives, and solutions.

Audience feedback will be our guide as mediators engage in lively exchanges, drawing from their diverse backgrounds and expertise. Don't miss this opportunity to expand your knowledge, connect with fellow Academy members, and empower yourself with the wisdom of the collective!

Making The Most Of Mediation: A Conversation

Presented by Antonio Piazza

3:15pm to 4:45pm

Much is lost if we let mediation devolve into simply conveying demands and offers...

"The disruptive impact of the reactivity inherent in adversarial negotiations can be mitigated by a mediation process structured to convert dialectic into dialogue.

In this one hour conversation we will walk through one such process that has proven useful in thousands of settlements over the course of my forty four years mediating - pausing at junctures along the way to discuss questions and observations..."

Following this one hour talk, we'll have an open Q&A session for 30mins.

Mediation Masterclass: Tying It All Together

Presented by Lee Jay Berman

8:30am-10:15am & 10:30am-12:00pm

Across the previous two days, we've had a fire-hose of information - so how do we apply all of that on Monday morning? In this workshop, we'll take a fact pattern of a business litigation case, and break down the various ways we can look at resolving it by viewing it through different lenses. We'll see what we may have been missing, and how to utilize each of the learnings from the retreat's stellar presenters along the way.

The Legal/Analytical Lens is perhaps our default view - 'how will this play out at trial?'; mapping out a risk analysis. We'll look at how to deliver this messaging effectively to counsel and parties and how to build credibility with the participants to allow a greater likelihood of changing their minds about their case values and potential outcomes.

Keeping with the same fact pattern, we'll take a dive into the Psychological/Relational Lens - what's going on with the emotions at play, whether visible at first glance or not. What can be done about issues that can often derail what looks like an otherwise purely logical negotiation? Here, we'll bring in Doug Noll's teachings on connection, anger, and trust, as well as our lessons from Sam Ardery on ego and humility.

Through the Business Lens, we'll go deep on often overlooked issues, taking into account business realities including tax implications, debt and financing, employee, brand, and customer base concerns, as well as cash flow issues, deadlines, partners/shareholders, and other stakeholders. Here we'll bring in learnings from Jeff Kichaven's ethics discussion, as well as the group's input from the interactive forum, looking at mediator ethics, business ethics, and integrity.

Finally, we move into the Creative Problem Solving Lens. Together, we will craft some truly creative resolution options, reflecting the entirety of what the participants in our case are going through - helping them meet their underlying interests, satisfy their psychological needs, consider their business/financial impacts, and work within their BATNA of likely legal outcomes. Here we will incorporate learnings from Jeff Kreisler's behavioral economics discussion, as we look at the negotiation of this resolution. We'll incorporate applying Tony Piazza's dialogue techniques to form a different kind of discussion and negotiation, and we'll even explore what Susan Guthrie & Colin Rule taught us about artificial intelligence. We will shift the discussion from a shuttling back and forth of compromised dollar positions to a negotiation that is more completely thought out, forward facing, creative, and collaborative.

ADR Market Report & Business Round Table (non-CLE)

Presented by Darren Lee & Guests

1.30pm-3.00pm

Following lunch, please join us as we review the latest ADR market research with NADN's Executive Director. We'll then engage in a wide-ranging business round table, sharing the experiences of some of the US & Canada's most in-demand mediators as to how they built up their own practices. If you'd like to pick up tips on how to grow your mediation business going forward, please be sure to stick around for this segment.
